When I said that my Dad was my hero and the best Dad ever, he would shrug and say, "Well, if you want to believe that..." He was a very kind and selfless person, and I'm very proud of the person he has become, but I remember many things he said and did that I could have argued otherwise about. When I was younger, I worked with a boy who was in my grade. Most of the other kids would tease him, but I never did. Well, I teased his sister pretty often. There was a time when he told me he had to tell his father something, and my Dad told me to just go along with it, because he didn't want the boy to be teased any more than he was already being. My Father is a doctor. His friend was lying at the hospital when I was a baby. He was a good friend and Dad met him in Pakistan, as a teenager. Dad's friend had the gift of healing. He was an angel, a messenger. He taught Dad how to heal people. Dad was a good man, but he wanted to be a famous MD. He would go to his friend's house and heal his wife and the children, and his friend's wife and kids. And as Dad moved up the ladder of the medical profession, he would ask to be a manager. He would talk about all the money he was making. But, he said he'd just be happy to be a manager. He said he had
